Re: National Center For Public Policy Research Demand For Inspection Of Books And Records Of The New York Times Company

Dear Counsel:

We write on behalf of The New York Times Company ("The Times") in response to your "Renewed and Supplemental Demand for Inspection of Books and Records of The New York Times Company" dated July 14, 2026.

Your selective culling of other stories that generated controversies is a thinly disguised effort to mask your real, and continuing, purpose: making a political statement about the Nicholas Kristof article. Nothing in your seven-page summary of a quarter century of grievances against The Times suggests enterprise-level risk or wrongdoing by the Board of Directors.

It is clear that you and your client have deep disagreements with The Times's coverage but a shareholder books and records demand is not a permissible way to vindicate them. Accordingly, The Times will not comply with your Demand. All rights reserved.

Sincerely,

Michael D. Blanchard
